Long Torpedo Boat Cruise,

Norfolk, Va., July 7 .- It is more of a problem than some people think to send the torpedo boats from here to the Asiatic station, and the difficulty of getting under way has resulted in as indefinite postponment of the proposed transfer of these boats to the distant station. The boats were to have started out early in April, but they are now laid up in ordinary, with no prospect of making the trip. In the first place the boats would have to be tested singly to detirmine, without question, their respective steaming radius. Then the convoy which tows them on occusion, would have to be taken along the coast with the boots for the purpose of drillling the erew and acquainting the officers with the method of handling boats. The danger of trouble is much greater with the small craft them with the big drydock, and no one can pretend to believe that the long trip would be free from mishap; some fear it might involve the loss of a boat or two. The authorities are in a great quandry and few of them are willing to take the responsibility of ad vocating the long voyage. On the other hand, the mayat authorities on the Asiatic station wish to have the boats sent out.
